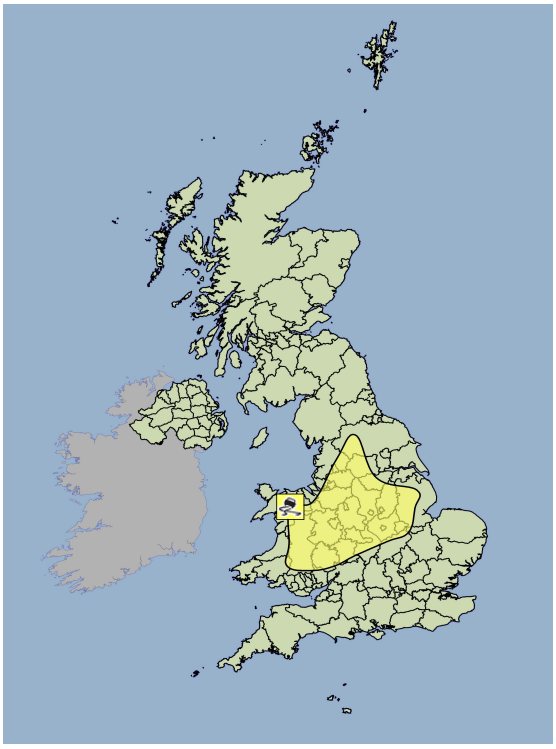
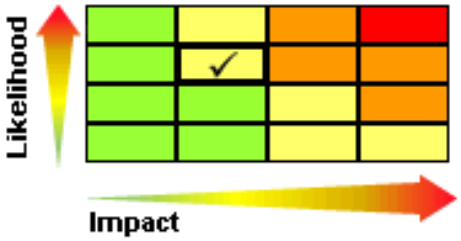
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
Following the overnight rain, sleet and snow, clearing skies will allow surfaces to fall below freezing. This will lead to icy stretches developing on untreated surfaces and the risk of treacherous driving conditions, especially where wet snow cover freezes.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Ice

Valid from 05:35 on Sat, 27th Dec 2014 until 10:00 on Sat, 27th Dec 2014

Clearing skies will allow road surfaces to fall below freezing this morning across parts of central and northern England and Wales. This will lead to icy stretches on untreated surfaces, particularly where wet snow cover re-freezes. The public should be aware that this could cause disruption to travel.
